

Youth Venture of Central Iowa Presents: Junior Master Gardeners

Junior Master Gardeners:

These young gardeners have a plot of land, a collective desire to produce food for their community, and the patience to let small things grow. Planting for the first time in the summer of 2010, members are planning on having a stand at the Altoona farmer's market. Proceeds raised there will be invested back into their garden. And leftover food will then donated to the local food pantry. It's not every day our community gets to see collective action taken from the ground to those in need. It's even more rare and exciting to learn this action is being taken by a bunch of 12 and 13 year olds looking for something to do with their summer.
